Who We Are

The Pediatric Environmental Health Clinic provides outpatient clinical evaluations and coordinated services for children with known or suspected exposures to environmental toxins. We focus on helping families and communities promote healthy environments where children live, play, and learn. Our team consists of board certified pediatricians with training in environmental health, occupational and environmental medicine physicians, industrial hygienists, social workers, and other professionals.

What We Do

We provide evidence-based management and guidance on exposures in children and pregnant women including:

- ▶ Environmental asthma triggers in the home, such as mold, pests, and allergens
- ▶ Heavy metals, including lead and mercury
- ▶ Certain chemicals, such as pesticides or solvents

Our Services

- ▶ Outpatient clinical evaluations of children and pregnant women
- ▶ Guidance and practical advice to reduce exposures to environmental toxins, and connections to local resources that address environmental hazards in the home
- ▶ Consultations for healthcare providers about managing environmental exposures in their patients
