

New York State Children's Environmental Health Centers

Environmental exposures can have lifelong impacts on children's health and development.

The mission of NYSCEHC (or "NYSCHECK") is to prevent, diagnose, and treat environmentally related conditions for families across New York State. As the first state-based model for pediatric environmental health services in the country, New York now has dedicated pediatric champions across the state working together to protect and promote children's health and the environment.

Our services include:

CLINICAL CONSULTATIONS

Our experts provide evidence-based, clinical pediatric environmental health services for families and health care professionals including telephone consultations, telemedicine visits, and clinical visits.

ENVIRONMENTAL HEALTH SCREENING

We are working to routinely integrate environmental screening into routine well child care. We help families to identify common environmental concerns and refer them to community resources such as home based services to reduce asthma triggers.

EDUCATION & TRAINING

NYSCEHC trains health care professionals and trainees to incorporate environmental health into routine health care. Together with partners, we educate families and communities about environmental health.

COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIPS

Together with diverse community partners, we work to promote programs and policies that protect and improve children's health.
